LAST-MINUTE NOTES: Oh, blast it all! Despite my valiant effort, I could not hold this issue below 20 pages, due to new submissions. It may be noted that we now have both a freshman and a junior writing for us. Hopefully, this will expand our audience and add a new sophistication (or lack thereof) to our fourth issue and beyond. I stayed up too late and got up too early to finish this, so please take that into consideration if I missed a printing error or two (or three, or four, or  $\infty$ ). Depending of reader approval, something must be done to shorten issues - dare I say - raising our standards??! OK, that's probably not going to happen. Lastly, if anyone cares, this is the last color of fluorescent paper that I haven't used yet. So next issue may have a repeated color.

Rosen Pawns Walkie-Talkie

School Can No Longer Hide Just How Much Financial Trouble ~~It~~ ~~Is~~ In

CAMBRIDGE, WI - With the holiday season just around the corner, teachers and people alike are all scrambling to find gifts for their loved ones, and, with plans underway to build the new elementary school, the Cambridge School District is under extremely tight budget constrictions. Nothing illustrates this better than the high school's own principal, Mr. Rosen, who recently pawned his most prized possession... his walkie-talkie.

Students commented, "He just hasn't been the same. He keeps reaching for his walkie-talkie on his belt, and, when he finds nothing there, he falls to his knees in tears."

Even a student who didn't care too much for Rosen as a principal said, "Man, I hate the guy as a principal, but I can really feel his pain right now. My whole family died in a fire, and now I'm living in a cardboard box next to the Woletz's place. I can really admire his strength." He then snuck into the office and vandalized the principal's room.

We went to the store where he reportedly gave it up and found the pawn shark who'd bought it from him. A short interview followed:

S: Did you or did you not purchase a walkie-talkie, recently?

PS: I buy lots of #*$@* off of bums. How would I know?

S: Was there a man who came here bawling?

PS: Oh, yeah, him. Yeah, a guy in a trenchcoat dropped by and sold me one. He was cryin' like a #*$@*! After I gave him the money, I had to pry the #*$@*'in thing out of his hands. I think he said, "Good-bye, Walter, I left you in my will."

S: Walter?!!!!

PS: That's what he said.

S: Ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha! He named it Walter! Ha ha!

Friends, loyal readers of the Sasquatch, it is our sacred duty to find Walter the walkie-talkie and set his heart at ease. If everyone could at least buy him a walkie-talkie for Christmas, it might be enough to keep yourself out of the office for a while. Please help us help our principal.

Kid Receives Goosebumps While Watching "Goosebumps"

BLOOMINGTON-NORMAL, IL - A fifth grade child sat at home after school on Friday and was innocently watching TV when the show he had heard so much about finally came on. He reportedly was given Goosebumps when a character on the show could not remove a mask from her face. "I felt really scared. Then, I got goosebumps!" the boy told us, quite proudly. His mother plans to sue the station for scaring her son.

Other White Meat Revealed: Pork

USA - After much anticipation, the long sought-after "other white meat" was revealed, Tuesday at a press conference in Delaware. An advocate told us, "Not only does no one care, but our state's final attempt to gain notoriety has failed miserably."

Santa Claus Discontinues Service to Town

TOWN, WI - Children all through Town were devastated by the announcement made by an escaped elf, Saturday, just weeks before Christmas. "Santa Claus is no longer coming to town," he said, breaking every child's heart within hearing distance. Little did the people around the world know, the elf had meant not only Town, but also the following towns in the United States: see Town pg. 37

Video Game Review

I'm sorry but I haven't played any new hot title in a while other than madden 97 on the Sega Saturn at a Toys are us.

I'll just give you a small review on Madden 97 ,and I'll tell you how far I'm on the Super Mario 64 game.

O.K. A while ago I played Madden 97 for the Saturn at a store for about 1-1.5 hours. This was a pretty cool game, but I thought it was hard to be on offense, and I didn't like Madden yelling at me and picking on me. This games good graphics and great sound make this game a 12 out of 15.

Might as well tell you how far I'm at on the famous hot new title Super Mario 64!

All right I'll tell you!

I have seen the last Bowser. Oh boy is he a tough won. He spits fire at you he blows up the island you are on, he runs at you, you name he does that rainbow critter. He's harder than any other last guy I have played!

Mr. Hill Strikes Fear Into Local Hearts:
Warns Local Student He's "On Thin Water"

Students at a local school in Cambridge were terrified today when local attendace-card-picker-upper Mr. Hill warned student of thier soon to be shortened lives. Witnesses were horrified and were heard to be saying, "We're all going to die, OH MY GOD!!!!!" Though unable to say anything else students were seen leaving the area with soiled pants.

The victim of the violence, Pat McRoberts, known by his friends as P.J., was reported as saying "He's going to kill me, I'll never feel safe again." It is apparent that Mr. Hill possesses some unknown power, only described through strange and mysterious patterns recently discovered in cornfields in Germany, Russia, and the unexplored regions of Iowa.

When questioned, Mr. Hill denied any encouter with the students, however and an hour after the incedint all students in the area during the threatening completely forgot where they were or what they were doing at the time.

When questioning with the victim resumed, after a short case of athsma, followed by a trip to the local hospital, the phrase, "weareallgonnadieweareallgonnadie," was the only response this reporter could get from the victim. This phrase must have some important part in the horrible chaos that could only be caused by Mr. Hill, but even the worlds leading scientist, Dr. Chris Kreull. The famous scientist, who has won two nobel prizes in the last three years, was heard later saying, "Maybe he was saying nadieweareallgon and meant some strange wierd new polygon that has more sides than anyone can count, like 80." In effect of the scientists word, all math books discusing polygons will be recalled and rewritten to include the new polygon.

A tape recorder found at the scene of the crime gives evidence of what really happened. The police have disclosed only select information from the tape, and stresses that everything is under control. "Now when we ran the tape back, all we could hear was screaming and yelling and shouting. Now if the people had been a little more quiet during the recording, we could've found something a little more helpful. Anyone who wants to hear the tape on their own bidding will begin in 5 minutes."

Though unsuccessful in our attempts to buy the tape, we were able to rent the tape from Mr Hill for twice the price he payed for, a total sum of $.50. In the tape there were only four decipherable words our team of computer hackers could find using only the most expensive software from around the world. The words, though garbled and distorted were closley matched with the words 'Your on thin water'. Horrible as it sounds, when presented to Mr. Hill, he broke down crying and admitted that he committed the

FAVORITE MOVIE REVIEW

Today's great movie is little known but is still good. It is called Night Of The Twisters. It's based on actual events and packed with terrifying footage of tornadoes and special effects. Blainsworth, Nebraska is in for a surprise! They have absolutely no idea of the deadly and unpredictable storms heading toward them. These storms will change their lives forever. Some of the main characters are Danny Hatch and his father, Jack, a former football star who is disappointed with his irresponsible son. Danny is baby-sitting his baby brother when the monster twisters suddenly whirl through the unsuspecting town! He rushes to the basement with his brother. Then the house is torn apart by the powerful twister. Danny survived with his brother, but the town is flattened. He still has to find his parents to see if they are O.K. He must go through downed electrical wires, broken gas lines, and try to help whom he can. Near the end he finds his parents, but the excitement isn't over yet! I definitely recommend this movie if you like action, but if you're looking for good acting look the other way because no one in this movie can act. I give it a 7.

This letter was sent to me by the man's coroner. Apparently he killed himself before finishing the letter- so I will assign him a clever help-column name to conceal his identity. Hmm, Double Dead in Delaware has a nice ring to it. Well, Double Dead, I think I can be of help (even though you are dead). You are both very different, and therefore, very special. Sometimes we forget we all have our own feelings. This reminds me of a time when a sad person called a nerd a nerd. It would never have happened, had the sad person been satisfied with himself as a person. I think there's some kind of quarrel inside of each of you that you haven't told the other. Now that you're dead, you've got a lot of time to talk about your differences. Glad I could help. Sincerely, Mr. Smily Face :-)

Mr. Smily Face urges you to remember that we all are special in our own special ways, and we all are special each and every day.

OPINION

I Cannot Survive Without the Everything's $1 Store

Of all the wrongs in this world, why did they have to take away the best store in the world before another holiday season?

My life revolved around the Everything's $1 store- and now they've taken it from me-- from the cool store with neon lights at East Towne to the superstore in Milwaukee where I purchased a game for my Commodore, a box of Guinness Book of World Records cards, a Webster's Spanish-English Inglés-Español dictionary, and an ice-cream scoop with a moving scooping module!!!!!! I've lost my will to live through the winter. The least they could've done is waited one more holiday season to call it quits! Yet when their supplies ran down and everything became 87¢ late this past summer, I knew I was witnessing the end of an era. What a depressing sight it was, to walk through aisles of empty shelves which had so recently been stocked with oven mits and old candies that didn't sell. It was like a wasteland, moreso. And yet we all go about our shopping without even considering the fact that it is gone forever. Our only comfort is in the memories that it has left us with... and the escape from math.

CORPUSTLE'S COOKING CORNER

Greetings aspiring chefs! It is I, Cody Corpustle with what is sure to make a fine meal for your family get-together. I call it Yule Stool. This has been a Corpustle family recipe for generations, and Granny Corpustle would have my hide if she knew I was publishing it, so I hope you can appreciate this artistic use of edibles!

Yule Stool

Oil cookie sheet with enzymes from a muskrat's pancreas.

Mix in horse trough:
3cups dung beetle innards
1tsp. worm feces
8lbs. horse apples
100ml 6M HCl (for flavor)

Put microwave on high for 10 minutes. After opening, the fumes may cause minimal brain damage, and eating it may put you in a coma, so have a phone handy to call 911. Enjoy!

Mmm, mmm, I guarantee that you'll never taste anything like it again. This maybe somewhat a result of the acid reacting with the taste buds on your tongue (or dissolving your tongue completely). I wish you a merry whatever and a new year of delicious treats from the kitchen!

Julian Lee Patents Basketball "Move": The Bonk

CAMBRIDGE, WI - Junior varsity basketball player Julian Lee had always carried the team on his back. Now he finds himself carrying it on his head. With an incredible number of moves (airball, slow pass, high pass, fall down, and double dribble) already in his arsenal, one may not have thought he needed a new one, but his latest secret move just happens to be the greatest of all. He unveiled it, quite unexpectedly, at his first game of the season. Not only did he perform it perfectly, but also in only 1 minute and 45 seconds of playing time. It was late in the 3rd quarter. Julian lost his man, got smacked in the face by the opposing shooter, his shot went in, and the ball came through the hoop, bonking Julian in the head on the way down. The shooter laughed all the way to the free-throw line and completed the three-point play that could not have been possible without Julian. All those in the crowd marveled at his bonk, and Julian came back out when the quarter ended, never to grace the audience with another bonk in that game or thus far this season. Coach Gaertner gave an interview with our elemental reporter, Ytterbium, in which he told us, "I am pleased that he is using his bonk sparingly. You can't rely on one move too long, or the opposing team will catch on to it-- or, in Julian's case, will laugh you off the court."

Julian commented, "Some people do behind-the-back passes, slam dunks, alley-oops, and the like, but I'm perhaps the only player who has the ability to perform the bonk." He then tripped on a cafeteria chair and almost dropped his lunch tray.

CHS Wrestling To Practice Hard

CAMBRIDGE, WI - Reports have confirmed rumors that the Cambridge wrestling team will practice hard every time this week. It is likely that they will run around a lot, do push-ups, and other assorted wrestling practice things. A player told us, "We always practice hard. You have to practice hard to be a wrestler." The extent of hardness of practice and whether it may be adjusted according to the skills of the wrestler are yet unknown, but rest assured, once it is known, you shall be aware of just how hard the wrestlers must practice nearly every day. As a wise man once told me, "It only takes one ball to play basketball-- it takes two to be a wrestler... and it takes eight balls to play croquet." That is pretty darn clever.

Taurus: The walls aren't really closing in around you. You're just standing in a trash compacter.

FISHIN' FOR THOUGHTS

By: Kylvoh "The Fish"

The Joys of Boating

Ah boating, a pastime primarily for people who can afford to belong to yacht clubs and own small ocean liners and yachts. Well, put on your little sailor suit and hop aboard-- because you too can go on long ocean voyages and see many exotic places! "How is this possible?" you ask. Well, I'll tell you.

All you need to do is go to someone's house that has a boat or canoe, hook it to the trailer hitch of your car, truck, or sport utility vehicle and drive as fast as you can to the nearest ocean. You may now find yourself quite distraught- asking yourself, "Why didn't anyone think of that sooner?!!" Well, someone did.

On July 8th, just days after we celebrated our country's independence, Ed Strazynski "borrowed" his neighbor's Lund Watercraft (he found the low sides convenient for urinating) and drove it to the Baja of California. So began his great voyage around the world. He first set sails for the Pacific Coast of North America where, off the coast of Panama, he was dragged, screaming, beneath the waves by a giant (and very cranky) squid and eaten alive. The boat was recovered and returned to the owner, unfortunately, however, only part of Ed's right pant leg and back pocket (containing his empty wallet) was recovered. It was returned, and burial services will be performed on January 5th after the holiday season.

Don't get me wrong-- this was a good attempt-- but he should have borrowed his brother-in-law's Cabin Cruiser and gone out on Lake Ripley for an enjoyable day of running down swimmers and playing chicken with the buoies (they're pretty good competition). These, of course, aren't the only ways to enjoy the sport, though.

Remember that the motor propeller can double as a blender to make fresh Margaritas for your friends. Just don't get your hand too close, or it will be ripped off and mangled, making a bloody mess and ruining your ability to use that appendage, and ruining the fruit.

And, as a final note, sea (motion) sickness is the leading cause of projectile vomiting in this country, so try to keep a large garbage bag on your head at all times.
